TO THE RATEPAYERS OF HONGKONG.	Hongkong, 15th June DOUGLAS STE

GENTLEMEN,-I intend to offer myself for reelection as one of your representatives on the FOR SWATOW, AMOY, AND FOOCHOW. Savitary Board. If you do me the honour of 'HE Company's Steamship again selecting me I shall endeavour to do during the coming three years as I have done in the past, that is. I shall do all I can to ensure that the Sanitary Regulations are enforced as justly and above I fairly and with as little hardship to individuals NOON. as possible, and I shall continue the struggle to obtain from the Government for the Board more liberal constitution and greater powers of control over sanitation and over the public moneys to be expended for that purpose. I have the honour to be.

TO THE RATEPAYERS AND ELECTORS OF HONGKONG. Hongkons, 5th June, 1891. GENTLEMEN,-The term for which your representatives on the Sanitary Board were elected having expired, I beg to offer myself as a Candidate at the ensuing election. Being the representative of the largest Landed L. Sindter, Major Turner.

Interest in this Colony, i.e. The Hongkong Land Investment and Agency Co., and being by profession a Civil and Sanitary Engineer, and having been for some time the Government Assessor, whereby I had to inspect every Tenement in the Colony each year for rating purposes, I am intimately acquainted with the sanitary condition of Hongkong; and if elected a member of the Board I believe I may be able to assist in suggesting improvements in the sanitary condition and overcrowded state of a great part of the City. While giving the strongest support to the Officers of the Board to enable them to efficiently carry out the Regulations enacted, I would do my atmost to prevent any Regulations being made which might prove vex tions restrictions In the MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF THOMAS to the owners of property or likely to answer no good purpose for the improvement of the Sanitation of the Colony. In his address he expresses his determination to continue the struggle to obtain for the Board a more liberal constitution and greater powers of control over sanitation and over the public money to be expended for that lected in the corresponding month of last year. purpose. Mr. Francis was a member of the committee which recommended that Mr. Cooper should be appointed the Water Authority, whereas, as it seemed to us, the control of the water supply ought properly to the island leaf grows in repute. The Java tea have been vested in the Sanitary Board from the outset. This is a work for which Mr. Francis has special qualifications and it would be a very serious loss to the colony if he were not re-elected. The present, we hope, will be the last election under the existing constitution. Section 4 of the Public Health Ordinance Surveyor-General, the Registrar-General the Captain Superintendent of Police, the vernor, and two elected by such ratepayers refuse to allow the United States to be represent. ing and ability. As to the European mem. bers, however, there can be no possible reason now in ordering it is only necessary to state why the whole four should not be elected, instead of two of them being appointed by the Governor. The Colony certainly has no occasion to complain of the Governor's nominees, Mr. EDE and Dr. CANTLIE, but that is not the question; it is a matter of principle that we are contending for. The next point on which amendment is required is the extension of the electorate by the substitution of the word "persons" for "ratepayers" read "such persons as are included in the "special and common jury lists, and also by "such persons as are exempted from serving "on juries on account of their professional "avocations." A great many people having large interests in the Colony are excluded from the franchise by the present law, such as those living in hotels or in chambers on the premises of the hongs in which they are engaged. The amendment suggested would give the Colony the advantage of the lodger franchise, which in relation to matters of sanitation, which affect all classes of the community equally, must be admitted to be desirable. It is also open to question action will be taken in the premises, as formerly whether the term for which the members of the Board are elected is not too long, or, if not too long, whether it would not be better to have a rotatory system of retirement, so elicited the following response from the proper as to give the electors more frequent oppor- authorities:- "Tsuda Sanu's family resided at tunities of expressing their views and so Mikamimura, in the Yasu district of Omi, Shiga that the counters used belonged to H. Mission and the burning houses. Captain Cain did all he could for the comfort of the refugees and sent a Chinese Customs official to try and recover the dead bodies and intimated that he should wait for a time, which if too long extended he should proceed on to Hankow to report the matter without waiting the arrival of the Fuhico, which was momentarily expected. The Customs official could not find the bodies of the murdered men and the Tehsing proceeded up river, meeting the Fultwo to deprive him of his watch and chain. CATHOLIC CHURCH AND SCHOOL It was reported that a Roman Catholic church and school, near the Fung-wen-shan Hills, had been destroyed by a mob of ruffians, but the trath of the report was not vouched for.

We (Daily News) understand that Lin Taotai. the Commissioner for Foreign Affairs at Nanking, who was sent up to Wubu to arrange about the indemnity to be paid to the French priests, has come to the conclusion that the pricate should be compensated, but that the two Chinese Catholic nuns, whom the people charge with being the cause of the riot, should be handed over to the Chinese authorities that the charge may be properly investigated. This deci-sion he telegraphed to the Tsungli Yamen, by whom it was approved. It is needless to say that the nuns will not be given up. They have already been examined by the magistrate t Wuhu, and the charge against them dismissed, and it would be a weakness of which the French are not likely to be capable to give these two poor women up on a charge which virtually amounts to witchcraft; for there is no other charge against them. The condition that they shall be given up is not likely, we are informed, to be insisted on for men in the position of Liu Taotsi and the Nauking Vicercy know. perfectly well how absurd a charge of witchcraft is, and the Wuhn Taot i will have to make good the loss suffered by the French unpleasant disposition on the part of the authorities at Nanking to take the side of the Tactai Ministers at Peking will have to assume a problem with which at this moment the comfirmness which they have not displayed for some mercial department is wrestling is how to find time in dealing with the Tsungli Yamen.

. We (Mercury) may mention that the two Chinese females employed at Wuhu as teachers by the French Mission, and who were accused of witchcraft, and acquitted by the Mandarin of the absurd charge, are now in Shanghai, safe with their families. THE UNITED STATES AND THE BRAZILIAN

London, 16th May. By direction of Lord Salisbury the commercial department of the Foreign Office is at present engaged upon the earnest study of the last commercial treaty between Brazil and the United States, and of the reports thereon forwarded by the British Ministers at Washington and Rio. The fact that by this treaty American cotton manufactures, among other things, are to be admitted into Brazil at rates of duty 25 per cent. less than those imposed upon similar articles made in this country has stirred Lancashire to its deepest depths of sorrow and indignation, and not unnaturally, for of the more bandise affected England sends every year to Brazil £3.250.000 worth, whereof over $2,500,000 worth are cotton

Lancashire, represented in the House of Commons by more than fifty members, of whom the majority are supporters of the Tory Government, exercises a great influence upon the present administration, and every ounce of this', weight is at this moment being brought to bear upon Lord Balisbury and his colleagues, several of whom are Laucushire men, in order to inince them to make some arrangement with Brazil whereby British goods may be admitted upon the same or better terms. Birmingham, too, is deeply interested, and Joseph Chamberlain, spurred by his constituents, insists that something shall be done. Lord fartington, who represents an important Lancashire constituency, is equally insistent, so that the Government darelnot remain inactive. The some tempting quid pro quo to offer Brazil. CHAPTER XXXL

HELEN'S SECRET. They met, these two who loved each other, with unmistakable agitation. Both wore very pale. and Helon was trembling visibly. Francis Roche was standing on the steps which led into the Gallery when Helen's cab drave up and he ran down and handed her out, and then side by side they proceeded together through the silent rooms. for only very few people were present, and they were for sport in little scattered groups. Then in one gallery they found themselves absolutely alone, and Francis led Helen to a seat. She looked at him very wistfully as he did this, as if mutely asking him to spare her some great pain; but he felt that he could no longer endure his own torturing auxioty, and at once asked her to tell him her pitiful story. "Tell me new, Helen," he said in an agi ated voice: "don't keep anything back-I wish to know the worst."

She drew a long shuddering breath, and die not enswer him at once. "Whatever it is." urged Francis, "I would rather know; do tell mo, Helen ?" She looked at him again; her lips quivered, and then in broken and trembling words she began a sad and tragic tale of days long past. "You remember when you came to Scotland Frank, she said. and when we met on the hills. that I told you I believed there was some mystery attached to my father's name?"

"I remember you saying something of the sort. Helen, and that I told you I did not care." "Yes; well, the night I returned to Ardleigh I saked Aunt Margaret if there was anything. and she answered in an agitated manner that he had been an unfortunite man, but she would say nothing more. She was also very much agitated when she heard your name; so much so that I asked her if she had ever known anyone of the name of Roche, and she said yes, in her youth she had known some one. We can understand this now. Frank."

"Yes, of course." "Then you came to Scotland, but I did not tell Aunt Margaret this, lest she should write to Lady Envisore; but one day when I went back to the house she asked me who I had been walking with. We were engaged then, Frank, so l told her, and Aunt Margaret could not conceal her emotion at the news. Then you remember the last day you were there-when we met each other twice P" "I shall never forget that day, Helen." "When I got home after we parted in the afterneon I found Lady Ennismore sitting in the parlour, and I knew then that Aunt Margaret must have written to her about you. Lady Ennismore also questioned me about you, and. I told her the truth—that we were engaged, and she said it could never be-that I must give you up. Frank, I refused, and Aunt Margaret stopped Lady Ennismore saying anything more that night, but the next morning she came to my room, and again urged me to broak off our engagement. I still refused-I felt very stiong. Frank-I believed you cared for me, and I knew what I felt, and I thought nothing could part

"I feel that still," said Francis Roche, taking one of her trembling hands in his. "Wait till you hear what I have got to tell you. For Lady Ennismore, finding all her arguments and entreaties were in vain; suddenly turned to me and began such a tale of shame, sorrow and orime that my heart seemed to die within me—that I felt I had no choice—that I knew in honour. I could never be your wife." "What did she say?" asked Francis Roche

"Who do you think I am, Frank?" answere Helen Drummond, rising in her overwhelming smotion, and standing before him. "A baseborn child-a child of sin and shame-born i secreov and bitter serrow. My mother was Nora Drummond, Aunt Margaret's sister-and my father ----

' Well ?'' " It's a terrible story, Frank-torrible for me to tell and you to listen to-my father was Norman Malden, Lady Ennismore's only brother, and he was murdered for his sin!" " My God!" exclaimed Francis Roohe horror

" Did I not tell you it was bost untold?" went on Helen passionately. "This dark tale of sin marry my unfortunate mother, but he had made this promise secretly, as his own mother was a promise secretly, as his own mother was a promise secretly. make his wife. At all events he refused to fulfil his promise to my poor mother, though her own family knew of it, and then, in her sudden anguish, she confessed to her sister-to Aunt Margaret-the dreadful truth. She was about to become a mother: and when Aunt Margaret heard this she wrote to Norman Malden and implored him to do her young sister justice." "He was a cur!" said Francis Roche steruly, as Helen paused in her sad story. "It was a cruel action," went on Helen; "but he still refused, and then Aunt Margaret told her brother James Drummond, who was a young man of nineteen, just about to start for Canada. He was naturally most indignant at the treat. ment his beautiful young sister had received, and he also wrote to Norman Malden. But no answer came to his letter, and this almost maddened James Drummond. So one dreadful day he met Norman Malden alone upon the moors, and insisted that he should marry his sister, be. the face of the woman who watched there day spoken in ; fore he himself started for Canada. Both men and night. were carrying their guns, and upon Norman fury James Drammond shot him in the throat. and left him lying dead amid the heather."

"And quite right, too, he thoroughly deserved "But it was a dreadful fate, Frank, and broke stained her hand with her husband's blood. his mother's heart, and after James Drummond saw what he had done, he too was filled with her breast Ludy Ennismore had taken her wifely nowadays; and if this old parson really likes horror and remorse. It is a sad and terrible story, but not a shade of shame or blame in my eyes rests on you. Besides, my father had disgraced himself, so I supposed his name was never mentioned. But when my mother heard her young husband was dead, and she herself was almost a child, she utterly broke down and my uncle gathered from her lips enough of the truth to know she was better away from home, and out of her mother's sight. depend on you, Prescott."

And this compact, unknown to any other bound these two men in closer friendship, and was regarded by the rector as a sacred duty. In the meantime we must not suppose that the Rev. Peter's constant visits to Brackenford escaped the notice of Miss Sinclair's acute eyes. During the stony grief, indeed, which had fallen on Lady Ennismore since her husband's illness, Miss Sinclair had had pretty much her own way at the Hall.

Lady Ennismore seemed to see or hear nothing beyond the sick room, and thus the governess did just as she pleased. When Lord Ennismore was first carried in wounded, young Curzon was still at Brackenford, but he left on the following day. After he was gone Miss Sinclair again exclusively devoted herself to the rector, and the good man rarely went of came on his visits to Lord Ennismore, without encountering pray every day for him new prothis handsome woman in one of the corridors or in the grounds. It was only natural she should like to hear or Lord Ennismore's progress, she said, and Lady Ennismore she never saw. And it must be admitted the Rev. Peter liked these little mostings, and the friendly pressure of the soft white hand, which was wont to linger in his own lean fingers .- But still the words she wished to bear were never spoken, though only the rector knew with what an effort he held them back! He used to sigh so delefully sometimes when he returned to the Rectory that Dorothy. Prescott insisted his digestion was out of order, and forced many a pill down his unwilling throat.

But Miss Sinclair felt that ultimately she would triumph. The poor man was in love with her, she knew, and therefore she was determined to But Lynwood was unfortunately not far from Brackenford, and about a fortnight after Lord Ennismore's mischance, Mr. Curzon again returned to Brackenford under the pretence of inquiring after Lord Envismore, but in reality with the idea of secretly wooing fair Julia Bingham. Miss Sinclair, however, believed that she was the attraction, and she could not resist the pleasure and amusement of flirting with him. Young Curzon kinself went on playing the double game which he had carried on before, and his few days' visit ended very disastrously for It happened that one dark afternoon when the rector, as usual, arrived at Brackenford, that "That no doubt was the reason that when her ing this said he would go down to the library

"Oh! Mr. Curzon!" The rector positively shivered. What should he do? What, in honour, ought he to do? he "No, not a little bit," said Helen, and for the saked himself in his misery. What he did, at all evenis, was to make himself smaller, if possible, "A great big bit, then?" said Francis Roche, and remain utterly unseen behind his curtain. "But I believe you are a little humbug, d'ye

The Rev. . & Co.'s Premises. Peter was pure-minded and high minded, and his ideal estimate of women was a very lefty

one. He was tender and gentle even to the rough-tongued Dorothy, and treated his two olderly sisters with the greatest respect and kindness. For their sakes he had restrained his feelings as regards Miss Sinclair, and now he was reaping the reward. Presently a servant came and told him that Lord Ennismore was awake and would be pleased to see him, and so Peter arose and went up to the sick-room, and in one of the dim corridors. where he very often encountered her he met Caroline Sinclair, but hurried past her with a cold and distant bow. He found Lord Ennismore looking better than usual, and when he told Lady Ennismore this, the eager auxioty in her expression as she answored him touched his kindly heart. "Do you think so -really think so ?" she said. "Yes, I really think so; but I wish you would ake more care of yourself. Lady Ennismoro." The two were standing, together in the dress. ing-room when those few words were exchanged, as the doctors were changing the dressings on Lord Ennismore's wounds, and the feverish look of anxiety on Lady Ennismore's face struck the rector very forcibly. "What matter am I," she answered, almost passionately, "if only he gets well?" "Still, for your children's sake--" "Oh! don't speak thus," she cried, interrupting him. "The children have their father-their dear, dear father-they have their father still!" "I pray he may long be spared to them." "Oh, Mr. Prescott, do you ever pray for him ?" went on Lady Emismore excitedly; "your prayers might be heard and enswered-will you

"All sincere prayers are heard, my dear lady," answered the gentle voice of the rector. "But not answered!" continued Lady Ennismore vet more excitedly; " and some people dare not pray-dare not, lest as a judgment upon them their prayers should be denied." "Let us hope none are in so sad a strait; we

No wrong had his hand done to a living soul, nor his tongue either. She was envying him: envying this quiet country parson, whose unstained and uneventful life was such a contrast to her own. But suddenly she started. "Hush, I hear Engismore's voice," she said; I must go to him-but do not forget what I have asked—the request I have made,"

"I will not forget," said the rector, and then they both returned to the invalid's bed-side. Lord Ennismore was very cheerful that evening, and the rector sat and talked with him nearly an hour.
